An Intergenerational Village for the Community

- A resilient community network where residents of all ages can safely access outdoor space, fresh food, social support, and economic opportunity without fear of displacement or exclusion.
- Riverfront as a communal engine expands the existing strengths of the corridor, while solving core issues of housing affordability, food access, and safety within the interiors of Fishtown and Port Richmond.
- Cultivate alternatives that improve walkability to and from park space, healthy food access, and playspace

Focus Area Design

Art & Healing Corridor - Lehigh Ave

A Riverfront Foodshed and a New Community

- A hub for the distribution of healthy food
- Replac existing big box commercial development along the lower Aramingo Ave, span out from the riverfront farmer's market to new residential development and food stands
- Local neighborhood restaurants partner with the riverfront to use home-grown produce supply through the community and along the riverfront

Art & Healing On The Riverfront

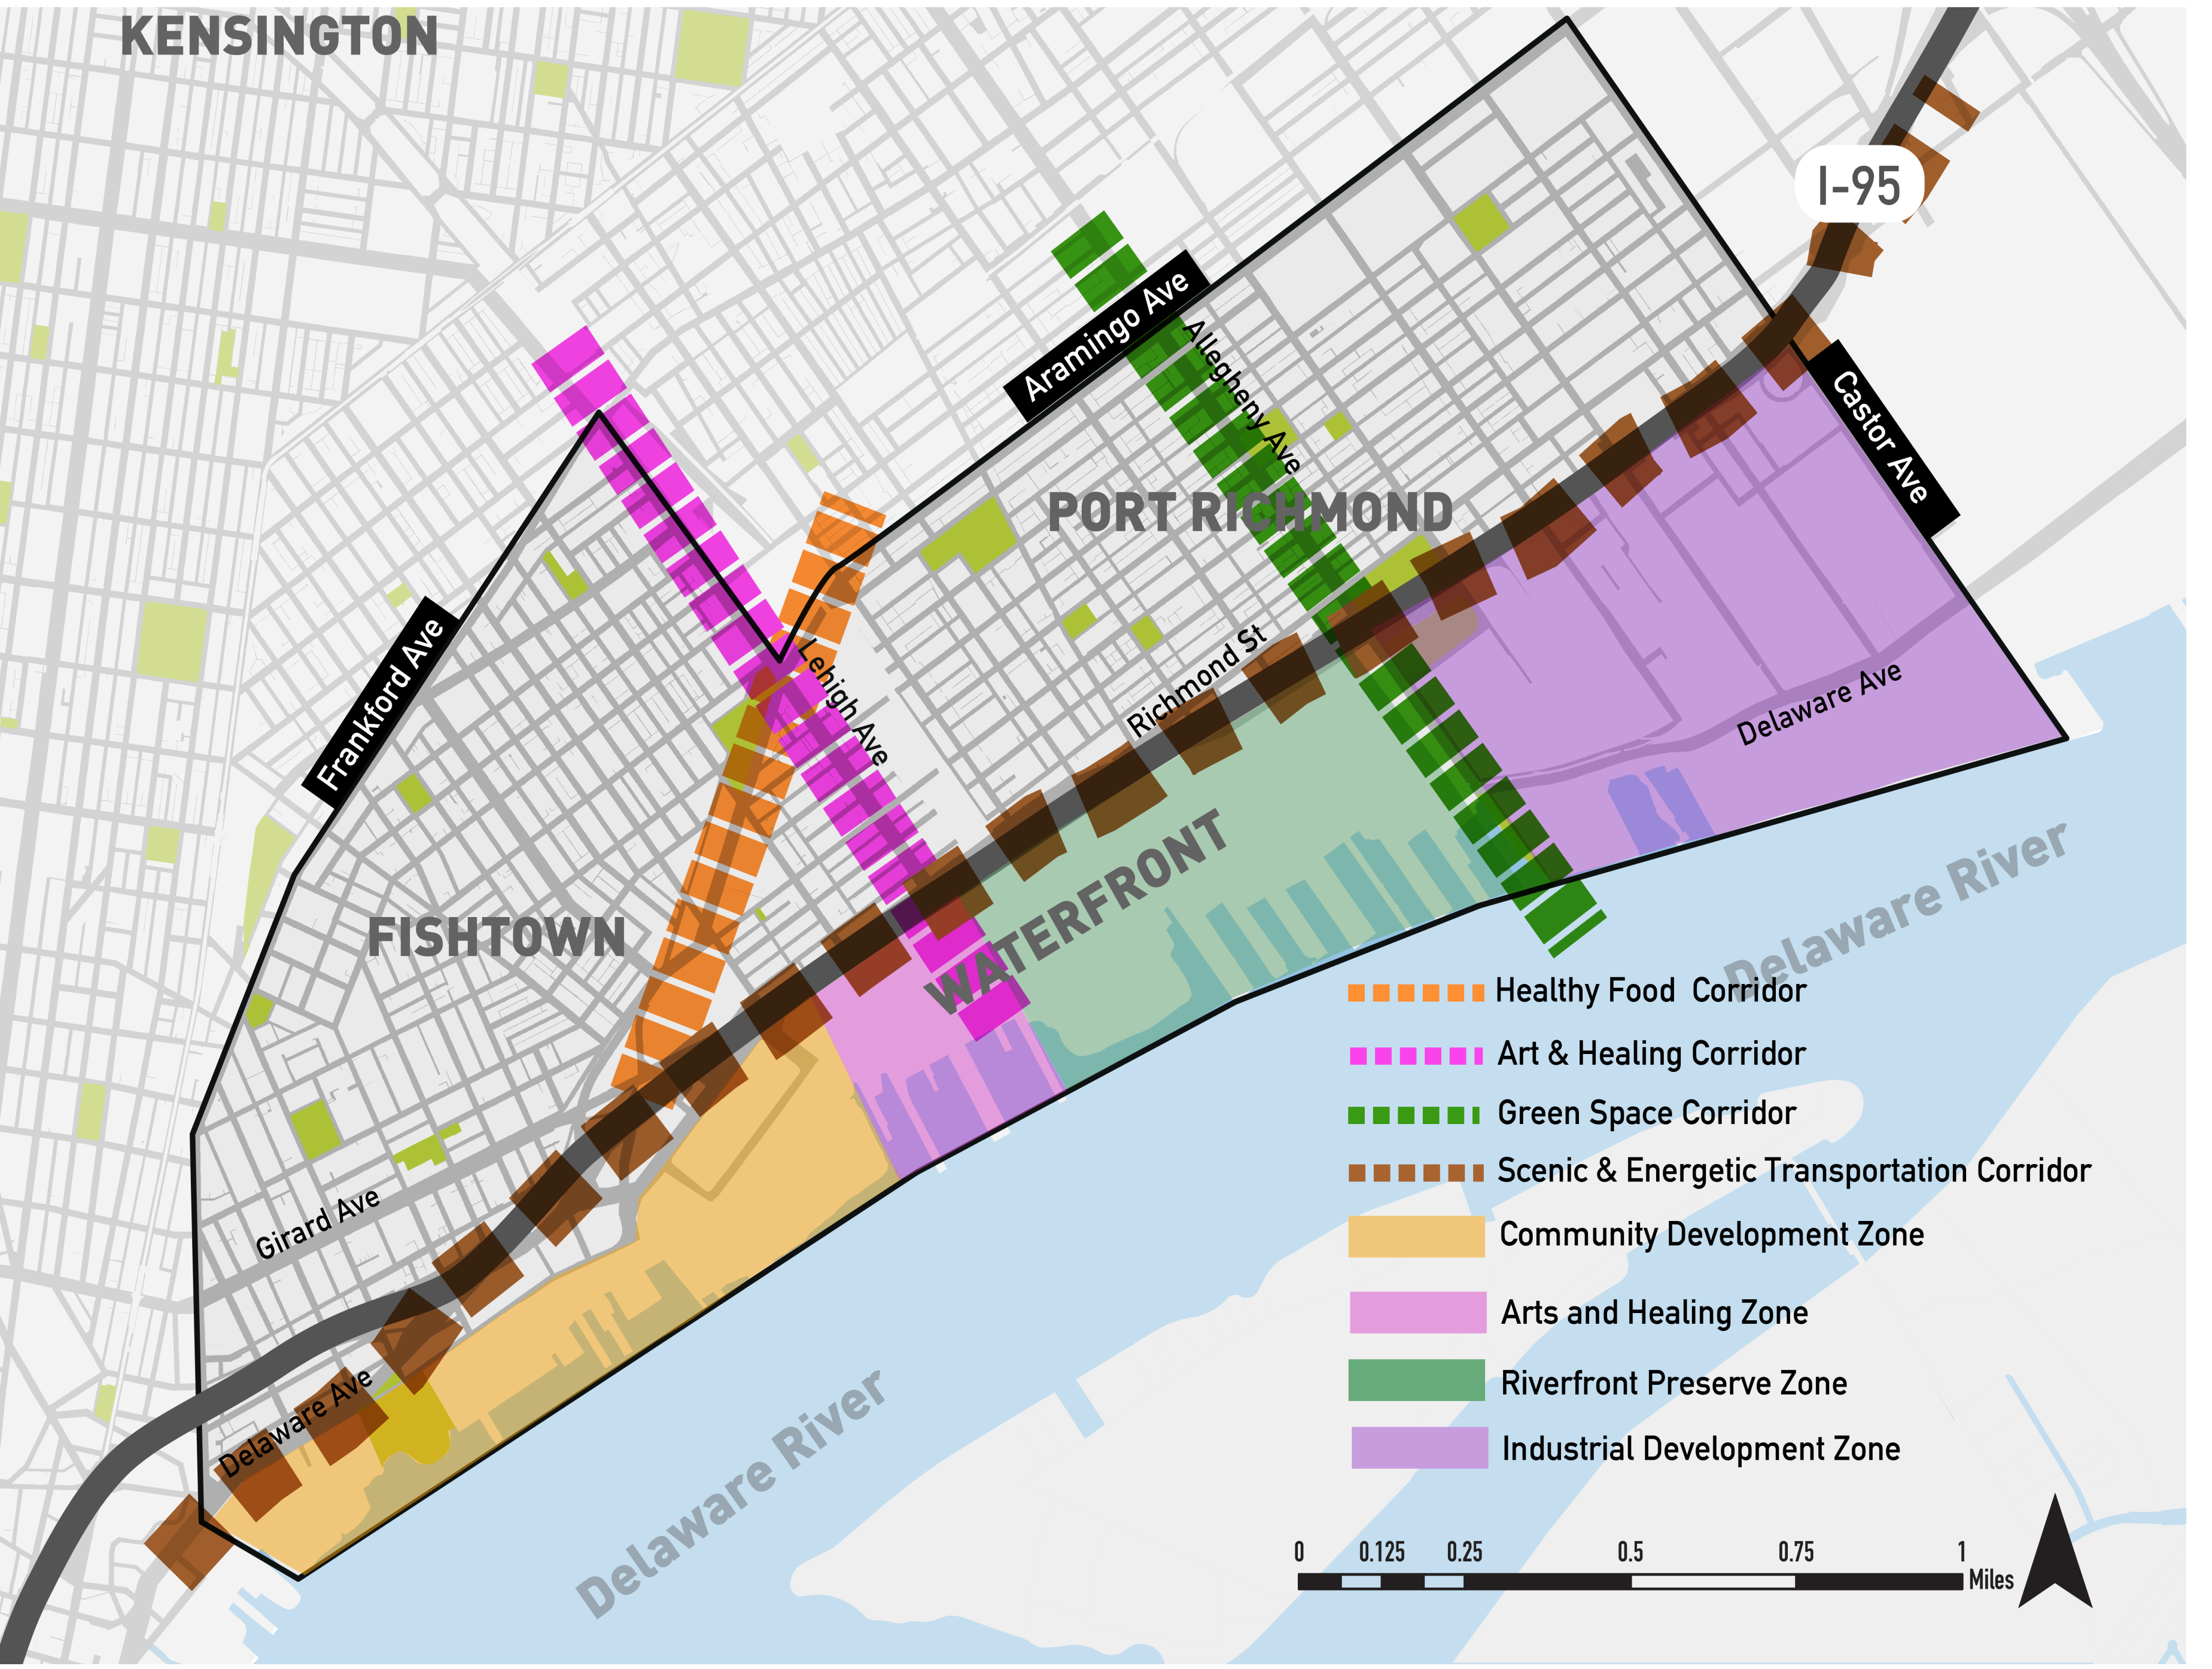

The insularity and homogeneity of Port Richmond, the rapid gentrification of Fishtown, and the Opioid Crisis and poverty rooted in Kensington have left three communities with different needs, and approaches to solving shared challenges.

- Arts adjacent programs and policy as physical manifestations for new connections to navigate these divides. All three neighborhoods share a common need for walkable and navigable public space through Lehigh Ave
- Lehigh Avenue as a link between the riverfront and Fishtown's artistic legacy, softening the boundaries between Fishtown and Port Richmond and connecting to activities on the riverfront related to graffiti pier

An Open Space Sanctuary

- Promoting an open space sanctuary along the riverfront upgrades and connects parks through the neighborhoods
- Parkspace and recreation space will continue up Allegheny Ave, stretching to Campbell Square
- Upgrades to ensure accessible use of parkspaces will be supplemented by a community land trust surrounding Campbell Square
- Moving up the Aramingo Commercial Corridor to a parkspace
